The theory of the prosecution is that Madame Pauw came into the project. Be that as it may, this much is certain that in July last she effected heavy polinies of insurance with French and Anglo-French companies, as annual premiums of £800. The money—If it was not Da Pommerais—is on- the President called on the Ayocat general for his known, for it must be added that Madame Pauw The Avocat-General then rose and said that TNGLISH PLATE LOOKING GLASSES, of was poor. In the first place, the doctors pronounced that there were no traces of int rnal injury at all; in the second, though they found no trace of poison, they declared that they were satisfied that some powerful toxical principle had been at work; and that digitalis was a prohable solution of the difficulty.

Such is the leading evidence in the case; the pravious character of the prisoner, though far from reputable, is not such as to point to the cenclarion that he was the man to commit murder without hesitation. The interest he seems to have had in the policies of insurance be explains by the allegation that they were assigned to him as a renayment for advances made to Madame Panw. | But the enormous value of the pelicies, and the large annual premium, cannol be explained so readily.
